Single-family	$8.76	ERCs are derived for commercial projects by dividing the 12-month average daily water flow in gallons by 300 gallons per day.
Master-metered	$8.76 per ERC	ERCs are derived for master-metered residential projects by multiplying the number of residential units by the equivalent factor of 0.5 ERC per unit for water.

ERC – Equivalent Residential Connection (1 ERC=300 gallons per day) represents an average daily potable water flow of a single dwelling.

MONTHLY WATER USAGE CHARGES

The Southwest Florida Water Management District (SWFWMD) preserves and protects the region’s water resources. It mandated that all water utilities adopt a water conservation rate structure by January 1, 1993.

The County’s approved water conservation block rates apply to all potable water sold by the County to all single-family residential, master-metered residential, and commercial class customers.

Water Conservation Block Rates

Master-metered residential water customers, such as apartments and mobile home parks, pay water conservation block rates based on

- 1) the number of units, or
- 2) the countywide average usage of all master-metered accounts.

Commercial water customers pay water conservation block rates based on their annual average usage during the previous calendar year, computed as the customer’s average usage per ERC.
